The Ladder of Co-production

Where are you on the ladder towards co-production?

7 Co-production

Co-production is an equal relationship between people who use services and the people responsible for services. They work together, from design to delivery, sharing strategic decision-making about policies as well as decisions about the best way to deliver services.

6 Co-design

People who use services are involved in designing services, based on their experiences and ideas. They have genuine influence but have not been involved in strategic decision-making.

5 Engagement

Compared to the consultation step below, people who use services are given more opportunities to express their views and may be able to influence some decisions about how services are designed or delivered, but this depends on what the people responsible for services will allow.

4 Consultation

People who use services may be asked to fill in surveys or attend meetings, however this step may be considered tokenistic if they do not have the power to influence or affect change.

3 Informing

The people responsible for services inform people about the services and explain how they work. This may include telling people what decisions have been made and why.

2 Educating

The people who use services are helped to understand the service design and delivery so that they gain relevant knowledge about it. That is all that is done at this stage.

1 Coercion

This is the bottom rung of the ladder. People who access services are made to attend an event about services as passive recipients. Their views are not considered important and are not taken into account.

Co-production: It's a long-term relationship

Based on Arnstein's Ladder of Participation, the TLAP ladder of participation describes a series of steps towards co-production which can be used in strategic commissioning across health and social care. It is designed to support greater understanding of the various stages of access and inclusion before full co-production is achieved.
